

Loving a cheap and fast feet fix in a jar

March 28, 2006

After months of hiding our feet in boots and other cold-weather shoes, we can finally embrace two of spring's hot trends: platform heels and metallic sandals. Of course, warmer weather also means it's pedicure time. If your tootsies are begging to be set free but also need a pick-me-up, I have a find for you.

The Heel Rescue foot cream by ProFoot Care isn't fancy or expensive. The dream cream is made with CoEnzyme Q10, which enables the skin's ability to renew itself, and Imidazolidinyl urea, a big word for a highly effective softening agent.

The cream isn't greasy and it smoothes out dry and cracked skin quickly. Heel Rescue is $6.99 and can be found at Walgreens.
